

ABSTRACT

This invention relates to methods of distinguishing among various types of differentiated and undifferentiated epithelial carcinomas, and non-epithelial carcinomas, by detecting the presence of p63 nucleic acid or protein expression. The invention also provides methods for detecting p63 nucleic acids and proteins, as well as methods for diagnosing and treating certain tumors based on whether the tumors express p63.